Venkata Ramani Challa

has successfully completed the online, non-credit Specialization

English for Research Publication Purposes

Basic elements of academic literacy— critical reading, writing, analytical thinking, and use of technology—foster academic success. Acquisition of such competences enables academic writers to challenge their own beliefs, seek out other points of view, and contribute to scientific discussions. The inseparable skills of critical reading, writing and research depend on learners' ability to use English appropriate for research publications. The specialization develops academic vocabulary and grammar skills necessary to write compelling research articles, persuasive grant proposals and effective technical report. The English for Research Publication Capstone project provides an excellent opportunity to apply the acquired skills.
